As part of the Wales Coast Path, the Ceredigion and Snowdonia Coast Paths trace a curve of 233km (145 miles) down Cardigan Bay. This book provides a 16-stage guide to the route, from Porthmadog to St Dogmaels.

The route passes through Snowdonia, up river inlets, over sandy beaches and along sea-tossed cliffs. Untouched fishing villages mingle with university towns and medieval castles, ensuring plentiful sights and seascape views. This is a key part of the Wales Coast Path linking the Llyn Peninsula Coast Path with that of Pembrokeshire.

The book provides practical details on accommodation and travel as well as information on geology, history and the many points of interest en route.

Key marketing points

- The only available guidebook to walking the route
- Heritage Coast with dunes, high cliffs, storm beaches, sandy bays and sea caves
- Good transport links by train and bus
- Part of the popular waymarked Wales Coast Path

About the author

John B Jones has lived most of his life in Derbyshire. He has walked extensively in Britain and abroad, including completing over 25 long-distance trails, climbing the Lake District Wainwrights twice, and all the Scottish Munros, Corbetts and Grahams. He has a great love of Wales, and, among others, is the author of an Offa's Dyke guide.
